British Columbia and the North

The following is the opinion of Lord Burroughes as set forth in a speech made by him in the House of Commons:—

would—they would have a fair and free access to land as fertile as that of the United States. No man who had not seen this country could form any conception what wealth the hand of nature had placed there. A great deal had been said about the barrenness of the country. It had been compared to Siberia and the rocky regions around the North Pole. Certain parts indeed

Witnessed the exhibition in the Ontario Legislature during the last session, but have come to the conclusion that his whole career has been one of purely party tactics. (Lambton) Here when it was first discussed last year, he was conveniently absent and during the present discussion, both he and his leader, the member for Lambton, had been as quiet as lambs, never opening their mouths, until goaded on to do so by their opponents, and then the mildness was which he fulminated his thunders and bitter philippics at every opportunity.

Mr. BLAKE—I did not say that.

Mr. BOWELL—No, you did not say Protestant but that is what you meant. There is no question as to the fact that the speaker proceeded in promoting the movement.

and thought you were sincere, not knowing by what feelings you were actuated. R now the elections are over in Ontario, a having made an agreement with a certain class of people not to discuss the question further, and knowing that your political allies in this House from Quebec would vote against you to a man, you have found convenient to keep quiet and push forward forth, to accuse any one of being actuated by party motives. Why this question?

been the thalting horse in every election contest in Ontario by the member for Durham and his partisans. (No, no) member for Durham says no, no, yet such the fact. Likenesses of poor Scott have been hawked about among the electors in a head and Blake's resolutions in the other influence men in their vote. (Hear, hear) The portals of the grave have been open and the dust of the martyred dead dragged forth to do the work of such politicians as member for Durham. (Hear, hear). Crocodile tears have been copiously shed, affected tears wiped from where none existed.

and indignant at the thought that no act

had been taken to bring to justice these murderers, and that all that was wanted was to put a match to the inflammable matter, and a conflagration would ensue. He did not wish to be profited by it, and now he wishes to put it in the moderate man, and that too, in the place where he knows action should be taken if taken at all. (Hear, hear.) He knew that a Local Legislature had no power to do with a question affecting the administration of justice in another Province. Yet, with his assumption of political honesty he did not hesitate to drag it before a body of men, of whom he knew had no jurisdiction, and cerity. (Applause).

Mr. HIXON rose to a point of order. The gentleman was wandering from subject.

Mr. Speaker said that he failed to see connection between the Speaker's remarks and the item before the House.

Mr. BOWELL bowed to the Speaker's decision, but thought he was justified in registering the insinuation of the member for W. Durham, and to point out that being politically dishonest himself he did not hesitate to accuse others of the same fault. (He heard.) He observed also, that the by saying that some expression should be contained in the resolution excluding claims of the Hudson's Bay Company. As the Government had pledged their word, these parties should not be paid, he would waive that point, and content himself with moving that the following proviso be added to the said resolution:—"Provided that the House in voting $40,000 to provide for compensation to sufferers by the usurpation of Rupert's Land in 1869-70, claims for lost property, or for imprisonment, or for forfeiture from the territory, does as upon them, notwithstanding that they shall be liable to the Government for the same."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.
DR. SCHULTZ'S SPEECH ON THE MANITOBA CLAIMS.
DELIVERED IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12th, 1871.
Mr. SPEAKER.—I would willingly have avoided any discussion of the matter which now occupies the attention of the House.
I would have avoided it, because everything connected with recent events in Manitoba has been to me of as painful a nature as now that we have better and brighter prospects, I would willingly have allowed whole matter to have remained untouched. Still, I find in my newly undertaken duty that one's personal feelings must not always be consulted, and that the interests of the people herepresenta, and of the country at large must be considered first, and the observations of the hon. gentleman for North Hastings, are such as call from me as one of the Representatives from Manchester all the information I possess on one, and principal point which he has adduced, namely the complicity of the Hudson

Co., or rather of a portion of their officers with the unhappy Rebellion of last year I am aware, Mr. Speaker, that the views which I shall advance in regard to the origin of the Red River difficulty, and the substance of the documents which I shall present in support of those views, may differ materially from those generally entertained in this part of the Dominion, yet I advance them with the full belief that they are correct, and, indeed, openly expressed by tens of that portion of the people of Manitoba, unconnected with the Rebellion or with the Hudson's Bay Company might at first sight, Sir, appear strange, a Corporation who had lately surrendered their rights to the North-West Territory, had received what might be considered fair compensation for that surrender, who, moreover, still retained a very valuable landed interest in that Territory could have any possible reason for doing anything but the prosperous, the advancement, and the opening of the country.

ment, and the peace of the country. I think it was generally advanced as a reason for allowing them to retain one-twentieth of the land, that this concession would be in their interests to ours, and be the means of allaying any possible source of discontent. But, to properly understand the bearing of this question, it is necessary for the members of this House to bear in mind that there are two elements in the composition of the Hudson Bay Company, namely:

ment, and the peace of the country. I think it was generally advanced as a reason for allowing them to retain one-twentieth of the land, that this concession would be in their interests to ours, and be the means of allaying any possible source of discontent. But, to properly understand the bearing of this question, it is necessary for the members of this House to bear in mind that there are two elements in the composition of the Hudson Bay Company, namely:

Stockholders of that Corporation are managing partners in the country. So as the Company confined its attention to the collection of furs—so long these payments were in accord, and the im- profits, which in former times were so fairly divided between the Stock- ers, who had advanced the money nec- essary to carry on the business, and those who in the country bore the care, the danger, and the loss.

labor of the trade. Hence it was that the Stockholder who assumed territorial as well as trading rights, would sometimes admit, that the country was fitted for something better than a preserve for bearing animals, that concession was never, made by one of the Island of whose profit was derived solely from fur trade, and whose right to participate in other source of profit was disputed.

was not entirely ignored by the Stockholders. It will be readily seen, though, Speaker, that there was in such a diverse interests, the elements of difficulty, and this became apparent as soon as the Stockholders consented to entertain the proposition for the purchase of their territorial rights by this country. While the Stockholders could see in the large sum paid for rights which were then in disan amicable compensation for the gradual but inevitable destruction of the fur trade which must follow, the inland trading officer saw in it only his own ultimate ruin, and he opposed the project with the power he possessed, and when the bargain had been concluded he felt that he had accomplished his ruin by the purchase she had made, and that the Stockholders had unfairly dealt with him.

so circumstanced, sir, are usually rash and even violent action and was the first evidence of this at the meeting of the officers at Norway held a short time after the conclusion of the negotiations and a few months after the capture at Red River. The following description which I found in one of the respectable journals of the Dominion

"One of the causes of dissatisfaction on the Hudson Bay Company's officials in the Northwest is this: They say that the £250,000 to be paid the Company by the Canadian Government will be pocketed by the British shareholders, and that not one copper of it will ever be seen by the traders in this country; doubt they are perfectly right in this, when the English shareholders receive the money they will very likely hold on to it. The traders of the Northwest proposed a plan to have the money which it carries out to make up to them the share of $300,000, which they say the English holders intend robbing them of. At a meeting of the Council of Rupert's Land—the territory—a motion was submitted by the Chief Factors, proposing that the share of $300,000 be divided among the factors and others interested just as usual and should be clearly shown that the English shareholders intended gobbling up the share of the Canadian purchase money. A long and animated discussion took place on the exceeding dishonestly proposition, and the

BRITISH COLUMBIA.
 DINNER TO THE HON. MR. TRUTCH—INTER-ESTING PARTICULARS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

(From the Montreal Gazette)

THE TERMS.

I should now like to speak about the terms of union themselves and show you how they appear from a British Columbia point of view, and I will confine myself to the questions of the financial arrangements—the representation and the railway undertaking—the only points which were real opposed during the discussion in Parliament. I will first speak of the financial arrangement, and, with your permission, will take you back to the time when the scheme was first discussed in the Executive Council of British Columbia. As soon as we came to consider this question of territory we arrived at the conclusion that no scheme based on the actual population of the country was capable of being adopted, that it was simply impossible that the country should receive a sufficient subsidy on the conditions to carry on the affairs of the Province, and that it was impossible to proceed according to the strict terms of the British North America Act in this respect. Having arrived at this conclusion, the only means we must have a certain sum of money, we resolved to adopt a fictitious scheme, based upon the customs revenue of the country. This scheme was rejected by your government in conference with our delegation last June, and I think properly so, but we then insisted that we must have a certain sum of money, and urged that it was unwise to cut the meat of the Colony down below the revenue actually required for their necessary expenditure, as the Dominion would ultimately find itself obliged to make a more liberal arrangement; and we pointed out that the Colony was giving up the only elastic source of revenue which we have—the Customs revenue—the only source of revenue capable of meeting the growing requirements of the people, and that even if we got at first more subsidy than our population entitled us to, year by year as our number increased the Dominion would get the better bargain financially. It was then proposed that for the land to be made over by the Colony for the construction of the railway, we should get a certain sum of $100,000 annually, and to this arrangement we assented. A false impression has been created on this point. We came here last year willing enough to give any reasonable amount of land in aid of the railway, and asked no compensation for it. But it should be borne in mind that the extent of land to be contributed by British Columbia for this object, is manifold greater in proportion to her population than that to be supplied by Ontario or by the Dominion, whose people are equally interested with us in this railroad enterprise, and it cannot therefore be justly said that we drove a hard bargain in this matter. (Hear, hear.) I assure you that the question of representation has not been considered of so much importance in British Columbia as it has here. I have always thought and stated as my opinion, that the strength of British Columbia in the Confederation must consist in her weakness, that in order to make the Dominion prosper, you must make British Columbia prosper, and that therefore the whole country would cherish our interests, and that the main use of our representatives must be to sit at a table to give information as to a country of which so little is known—as has been so clearly shown by the late debates. When our delegation came here last year our scheme proposed a representation in the Commons of elect members, proportioned to a population based on the customs revenue of the country. This was reduced to six, and we unwillingly agreed to the reduction. We have never been able to appreciate that we were bound by the British North America Act in this matter of representation, and had we been told that we could have under that Act no representation, as I have heard argued, or only one member, we would have certainly said, "Much obliged to you, we will remain a little longer as we are," (Laughter.) And now with regards to

of these terms. After all the rest of the scheme of union had been fringed in Executive Council, it was unanimously agreed, and this conclusion has been supported by the whole community, that there could not be any real union with Canals without a material connection by the construction of a coach road first, to be followed at once by railway. That was the conclusion arrived

For the Intelligence.

I'm Lame.

Bring me my bow with spear and gun,
My bat and skis and fishing gear;
Go hide them somewhere in the evermore,
The game laws nothing have to fear—
I'm lame.

Take from the wall the belt and knife,
The basket and net and picture all;
That bring to mind the boyhood time
I had with you both spring and fall—
I'm lame.

No more unhazy on my pallet lie,
And rise before the early dawn,
And stir the fields, my dog and I,
And sit the hills to wait the morn—
I'm lame.

My poor old dog lies by my side,
Grows deaf by many aunts' report;
From seely pool the pippin nips
You'll never spring again, old sport

No more the frolic, twinkling morning air,
The song of birds with clam'rous about
Will chatter me with soft robed and real
I'll thank the silvery spotted frost—
I'm lame.

Nor by the torchlight's faint and garish
Peer through the dusk and barbaric food
To strike with spear the wary fish
And wet my boat with chilly blood—
I'm lame.

The wicked keeper needless looks
With eager glance my balls to take;
The net no footing has for me;
I cannot either dodge or skulk—
I'm lame.

And so it is as we go,
We drop some joy not to reclaim;
This world can never be the end,
We're all so miserably lame.

Belleville, 21 April, 1871. LIONEL

England's Detence.

Mr. John S. Mill has made a speech to the Working Men's Peace Association upon the national defences, military education of the people, &c.

He points out, not a little disappointed by the sea from the rest of the world, but an Imperial Power which has possessions in each quarter of the globe and which cannot hope to maintain the integrity of its dominions except by lands, engaged in a maritime war, which our fleet will be scattered about the world, and the Channel will be a scene of carnage. Then, supposing we have opposed to a coalition of maritime powers, a Channel fleet might not be strong enough to prevent the invasion of the Channel, a day's intermission. It might even be defeated in a great naval battle, and, as Mr. Mill needs to be of opinion we are not, Mr. Thiers, that England would suffer from the invasion of the Channel, he says, "as absolutely dependent on the Channel fleet for the safety of the country as if we had no military force at all." We have got no army, "but we have a navy," says Mr. Thiers, "and a military force which costs us some thirty or sixteen millions a year, would swallow up by the invading host, the Channel fleet, and the country would be left at the mercy for this state of weakness." But that "heretofore the army should be a whole people, trained and disciplined. The country was never safer than this country was, and the army was the first, beginning at schools with boys at eight years old, and continuing the

Mr. Mill has held the severest bias. Mr. Cardwell's scheme of army reform which has yet received. The army thanks to large wherit is not and vastly too small when it is: and the army in the end at a strength of three millions upon it. As it is, they twice as much for being without an army the Prussians, who can place half a million in the field at a fortnight's notice. Thus the army is only possible when the is compulsory service, and it is most to contingency that Mr. Mill recommends military training of the whole male population in the field at a fortnight's notice. It would be absolutely invasion-proof, at the lowest reckoning, twelve millionster a year would be saved. By extending the present system the nation may be enabled to meet the emergency of war, be supplied with ever growing material in the field of European continent in England, on the other, Mr. Mill desires the thanks of his countrymen for his vigorous policy.

British Agricultural Wealth.

The British Agricultural Returns for 1871 show that the total acreage of the whole United Kingdom, under all kinds of crops, is 36,000,000 acres, of which 26,000,000 are 60.6 per cent. arable, against 59,100,103 in acres; Ireland, 10,052,878, and the Channel Islands 117,918. The total acreage under corn crops in the United Kingdom including beans and peas, was 11,755,031 of which 9,348,041 were in Great Britain and 2,478,100 in Ireland; and 83,008 in the Islands, the rest being monopolized by potatoes and other green crops. The average of acres under wheat alone in the United Kingdom was nearly 300,000 less than in 1866, which represent a diminution in the home supply of wheat of 700,000 quarters. The total number of each kind of live stock in the United Kingdom was Horses about 2,880,000, of which Great Britain possessed about 2,080,000 and
